More Facilities At Warren General Hospital

A press interview with administrator Joseph Williamson at the close of yesterday's Warren General Hospital board of directors meeting disclosed new facilities and plans for future improvements at the institution.

Now completed at Warren General is the new admitting office which has been removed from the hallway and placed in the nicely renovated nurses' locker room on the main floor. Here interviews with incoming patients can be conducted in private and there is an enclosed waiting room.

The locker room, in turn was moved into more colorful surroundings in the junior nurses home.

The next big physical change at the institution will be the expansion of the pediatrics ward to a capacity of 21 from the present 13. Two wards along the passageway to the pediatrics ward will be fixed in such a flexible manner as to accommodate youngsters during the heavy seasons and adults when necessary. Children up to 12 years of age can be accommodated in the ward.

The board has given the go ahead signal for placing a completely new floor in the operating room and will pay in the range of six to seven thousand dollars. The floor is presently made of wood and is part of the old building. It was last covered in 1953.

An interesting point brought out in the interview was that the operating room is completely explosion-proof and that special shoes and clothing are used by all personnel entering the room to prevent any static which might cause an explosion.

A new piece of equipment due at the hospital next week is an Expirograph, or a machine used to measure vital capacity with a lung condition. It cost about $6-700, was made in Sweden and is one of the first in the United States.

Another piece of equipment being considered is the Jefferson Ventilator.

Leaders of the board have expressed a strong desire to increase the membership of the Warren General Hospital Association. At the present the membership is 180. A life membership in the association is $10.

A step toward "better communications" and "increased understanding" between the board and Medical Society has been taken. Two members of the Medical staff, Dr. Ericsson, president, and Dr. Raymond Lowe, vice president and chief of medical service, now sit in on the board meetings as ex-officio members. In turn, President Robert Wilder and another board member, visit meetings, whether regular or special, of the Medical Society.

In Brief

BURGESS RACE

The burgess race in Warren has developed into a three-way picture. The man most mentioned in past weeks has been William Fuellhart, head of the civilian defense in Warren county. In the past two days the names of William Lutz and Leon Laskaris have been added. Whether all of them will be nominated at the January 4 meeting or whether one or two will withdraw can determine whether it is to be a race or a maneuver.

DOG LICENSES ON SALE

Dog licenses for 1960 are on sale in the county treasurer's office to replace the 1959 tags which are good only until January 15. The cost of licenses for male and spayed dogs is $1.10. For females, $2.10. If you want your license mailed, include the price of postage.

Also available in the same office are the new 1960 fishing licenses.

NEW STATION OPERATOR

Chet Munksgard, who has been operating the Texaco Station on Pennsylvania ave., W., for the past three and one-half years, will team with Glen Logan and take over the new Pennzoil Station now being completed at the corner of Pennsylvania ave., E., and Carver st. The team plans to open the first of January.

JUVENILES APPREHENDED

Three Warren youths were apprehended by the borough police this week for shoplifting expeditions in downtown Warren. The youths were all about 14 and 15 years old.

FORCED LANDING

A plane landed on a National Forge Company field near Irvine yesterday afternoon when the flyer lost his way and ran low on gasoline. Rod Panniers, of Toronto, and flying out of the Shawnee Air Port near North Towanda, was flying to Jamestown and became lost in the low ceiling. He was flying for hours to obtain his American license. With gasoline replenished he took the Piper Cub neatly off the field and headed for home.

FOUR PASSENGERS HURT

Four young ladies from the Warren area were injured in an automobile accident that occurred early Thursday morning at 1 a.m. at the intersection of routes 62 and 69. A car, operated by Clarence Rarey, Jackson Run Road, was proceeding north on 62, and when Rarey attempted a left turn onto 69, he pulled in front of a second vehicle, driven by Nancy Blume, 28, of Clarendon. The Blume car was traveling south on 62 at the time of the mishap.

DECORATE THE HOSPITAL. Eighteen members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Warren General Hospital were busy decorating the hospital for the Christmas season Thursday afternoon. Pictured here are some of the diligent workers around the giant Christmas tree in the reception room.

Those who worked on the project were co-chairmen Mrs. R. F. Otterbein and Mrs. Sheridan Brown, and Mrs. Delbert Lewis, Mrs. Clifford Johnson, Mrs. A. B. Chairamonte, Mrs. J. T. Valone, Mrs. Howard Alexander, Mrs. J. B. Leidig, Mrs. Joseph DeFrees, Mrs. Hugh Robertson, Mrs. Merle Kremer, Mrs. Wayne Helmbrecht, Miss Mary Craft, Mrs. James Barrett, Mrs. J. F. Crane, Mrs. Stewart Lyon, Mrs. William Crossett, and Mrs. Marshall Smith.

Injured in the collision were Joan Sedon, 28, Warren, a bruised left rib and neck injuries; Lois Simpson, 25, an injured right ankle; Mary Sedon, 23, of Warren, a left shoulder bruise; and Patty Baker, 25, of R. D. 1, Clarendon, who suffered forehead abrasions and bruises.

Damage to the Rarey machine was estimated at $100 and to the Blume auto about $900.

THE SEARCH FOR TAX MONEY

Few are the councils, school boards, and other governing groups who are not looking for additional funds these days. The task has not been made easy by archaic tax laws which persist in many states, including Pennsylvania. The public does not want to face the facts of taxation and the politicians are afraid to force a showdown.

Warren county's county seat has a council which is pulling and pushing in a tax debate frenzy that will affect every corner of the area. Warren needs $100,000 next year with which to continue its paving program, correct a storm sewer lack, and pay for a few other required items. If it decides to obtain this money by way of an earned income tax, neighboring political subdivisions will do likewise in order to keep the money at home.

Warren's solicitor, Knox Harper, says this is an expensive tax to collect if it is done correctly. He says a tax receiver must be appointed and complete records kept. This will cost a tidy sum.

There are some on council who don't believe it need be so expensively elaborate. They are going in to other areas of authority in an effort to learn if there is a simpler way.

No matter how you approach it, a new tax, such as the earned income levy, is not easy to put into effect. It offers new problems and it has opponents of many hues who for numerous and various reasons, most of them extremely personal, will pressure councilmen to forget the tax.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU

Council has at least one easy solution to its money problem, but it also has some opponents, very powerful ones. For years council has been faced with the ceiling on property millage. This handicap has been removed through the new assessments and now that the first year has gone by and the percentage limitation no longer applies, the full millage is possible.

All of this talk about millage, earned income percentages, head taxes, and occupational taxes means little more to the average citizen than the fact that whatever is done it will cost him some money. But he has a very hazy conception of how it applies to his specific case.

Using Warren as an example, let's see if we can lay it right on your own account book.

Warren actually is trying to raise about $80,000. This means that an earned income tax of 1/2 per cent would do the job.

It also can raise the millage, now worth about $28,000 per mill, and produce the required sum. This would require about three mills.

No more per capita tax is possible (fortunately) and the occupational tax is a poor thing which is not fairly estimated and in fact has no true basis for classification. If it does, no one is using it.

It seems we are faced with either an earned income tax of 1/2 per cent or a three-mill increase on your property tax. Which will pinch you the most?

You can make the comparison, and you only. For every thousand dollars of your assessed valuation you will pay one dollar in taxes if a mill is added. If three mills are added you will pay three dollars more for each thousand of your assessed valuation.

If your home is assessed at $5,000, a three-mill increase will cost you another $15 a year. If it is $4,000, the increased cost will be $12. If you are fortunate enough to have a house assessed as high as $7,000 your increase will be $21.

If the earned income tax is used it goes like this. If you earn $5,000 a year you will pay a tax of $25. If you earn $3,000 a year your tax will be $15. If your income is $7,000 a year the wage levy will nick you for $35.

You can take it from there. For example, if your home is assessed at $6,000 and you earn $7,000 a year, the property tax increase of three mills will cost you $18 and the income tax will cost you $35. And even if you make $5,000 while owning such a home, your income tax will be $25.

If you are renting a home or are paying room rent, don't think this does not concern you. If the property taxes go up, so will your rent. Everyone, with very rare exceptions, pays the property tax in one form or another.

The one which really misses a big share of them is the per capita tax. About two thousand people in Warren escape paying that one.

THE FAIREST

Under Pennsylvania's antiquated tax laws it is impossible to assess a truly fair tax. If the income tax could be graduated it obviously would be the most fair because it would be based on ability to pay. But Pennsylvania laws were written by those who wanted the little fellow hit just as hard as the big purse, and those controlling Harrisburg have seen to it that no radical changes have been made.

It looks to us as though under the present set-up the "average" taxpayer might be billed for less in any Warren county community or township if millage were used to gain new money. He would pay less than if the earned income tax were applied to his salary or wage.

And the machinery for property tax collections is established and ready to go. We do not think it the fairest of taxes, but under the present arrangement the choice is quite limited.

Each individual will have to apply it to his own situation. Either tax is far more fair than the flat per capita tax which wallops a man for every person in his household over twenty-one. That one's trip to the gallows is long overdue.

ONE MORE ANGLE

In Warren there is an additional fact we must face. If the council uses the earned income tax to obtain a half of one per cent, it follows that the school board may use the other one half of one per cent allowed a community. If it doesn't, it also will have to resort to the millage increase.

In such a situation the cost of collecting the income tax might be greatly reduced by dividing the costs between the two budgets.

But the problem of the individual remains the same. Except that he will be multiplying his assessed valuation by six or his income by a full one per cent to make the comparison for his private budgeting purposes.

You figure it out.

Interview With Nehru

By Marquis Childs

ATHENS. -- If Prime Minister Nehru is at all disturbed by the attacks on him at home and by the threat of further Chinese aggression on India's northern frontier, he shows not the slightest sign of it. In an hour's talk with this reporter just before leaving New Delhi with the press caravan accompanying President Eisenhower, he ranged over a wide variety of topics, speaking with the brilliance and the subtlety that are his hallmark.

Nehru talked at length about the nature of the border on the northeast and northwest frontiers. It is the wildest and most isolated country and now the impenetrable silence of winter has set in, with the mountain passes at 12,000 feet and the peaks at 14,000 feet or above shut away for many months.

"It is in a deepfreeze just now," Nehru says, smiling a little as he uses this American expression.

While he would not discuss directly the military or political future of the border dispute with China, and according to all reports he was reticent on this score even in his conversations with President Eisenhower, he gave the impression of wanting to believe that the dispute itself is in the deepfreeze. With the word "wonderful" he praised the tact with which Mr. Eisenhower, in all his public statements in New Delhi, avoided any apparent involvement in India's crisis.

Nehru leaves no doubt that the last offer made by Red China's Premier Chou En-lai is unacceptable. That was for both sides to withdraw from the line presently claimed by the Chinese so that a no man's land of approximately 30 miles would be left the opposing forces.

"That would, of course mean that we would surrender all the checkpoints that we have established," he said. "That we could not do."

The Indian counterproposal calls for a no man's land of about 20 miles but it would not sacrifice the strongpoints that Indian mountain warfare has established in this wild country at so much cost of money and effort. As an example of the difficulty of operating in this terrain, Nehru talks of the northeast frontier border point of Longju which the Chinese seized in the late summer. The Indian force that was driven out is less than 10 miles away but it takes five or six days to cover that distance over mountain passes and precipices that must be scaled with ropes and the other equipment of skilled mountaineers.

What to do about the Chinese incursions across the border and particularly the road they have built on the northwest frontier between Tibet and Sinkiang, which at several points crosses Indian territory? Nehru gives no prescription beyond indicating that the buildup of strength on these remote frontiers, which never really have been demarcated, together with the work to bring the wild tribesmen of the northeast frontier within the Indian framework, must be accelerated.

"Perhaps we could have moved faster, perhaps we could have done more." This is his only concession to his critics. So much must be done in India -- that is the theme he returns to. And he makes no secret of the massive assistance in long-term credits that India must have if the third five-year plan is to be a success.

These credits, according to Nehru, must be for 15 or 20 years -- two to three years would be of no use -- for capital investment. He is hopeful that a plan now under discussion for a commission of German, British and American bankers to pass on India's needs and recommend a program for private and government participation will go through. A prominent British banker, Sir Oliver Franks, has, according to Nehru, already signified his willingness to serve on such a commission. John J. McCloy of the Chase-Manhattan Bank in New York is suggested as the American member, but McCloy is still to be heard from.

There is a sense of quiet urgency in this discussion. India cannot stand still.

On the subject of the Khrushchev-Eisenhower talks, Nehru spoke with warmth. He believes that Khrushchev is just as genuinely desirous -- for his own purposes -- of peace as is Mr. Eisenhower. And he believes, too, that the Soviet Premier is making every effort to restrain Red China and quiet the dispute with India.

"When Mr. Khrushchev was here four years ago," Nehru said, "he spoke to me about America and Great Britain. He said you're friends with them. Why can't you help me to get together with them. Then he went off to Burma and there something angered him and he delivered an attack on British imperialism."

"When he came back here I ventured to suggest that this was not the way to be friendly, that this would, in fact, offend every British citizen. I have never forgotten what he said to me in reply:

"You must know that we have lived in a state of siege for 40 years and we cannot be insulted."

In Nehru's view Khrushchev desires to lift this siege and give his people some of the rewards of life for which they so deeply long. This, he feels, is at the heart of Khrushchev's desire for peace. A war between China and India would destroy all his hopes.

On the talks he has just concluded with Mr. Eisenhower, Nehru was reticent but he spoke with warmth of the 1-1/2 hours of discussion that they had three years ago when the Prime Minister went to Washington. He recalls that during all that time Mr. Eisenhower only once lost his temper and that was when he spoke of Red China and the fact the Chinese still held American prisoners.

What a stupid thing, Nehru says of the Chinese refusal to release all the Americans.

But Nehru the politician pales alongside Nehru the symbol of this vast continent with its fantastic contrasts of people and climate. He talks, with an enthusiasm that is young and almost dynamic, of the airstrip that the Indian Air Force has built on the northwest frontier. At 14,600 feet the Air Force claims it is the highest landing field in the world.

"I said I wanted to go there and they took me," Nehru said. "The ground is frozen all the time, of course, and there are no trees so it was simply a matter of leveling off the strip, taking the stones away and that sort of thing."

"I can't tell you how wild and remote it was. They pointed to a mountain and they said: 'There, that is China.' And you know what impressed the tribesmen most? It was not the plane itself, it was the jeep the Air Force had brought with them. That, in a country completely without roads, simply overwhelmed them. Of course, I stayed only two or three hours."

That is Nehru the man of imagination, the adventurer, the restless seeker who is so often impatient with the claims of government and politics. It helps to explain why he is for the indefinite future the indispensable man for India and for Asia.

An Announcement From Warren General Hospital

The following is the current policy regarding the administration of anesthesia to patients who are admitted to Warren General Hospital for emergency operations and to maternity from 3 P. M. to 7 A. M. weekdays or on Saturday and Sunday.

Every other night and every other weekend there is a nurse anesthetist on call to give anesthesia service.

On alternate nights and alternate weekends there is a physician (anesthesiologist) on call to provide this service.

Patients receiving an anesthetic from the nurse anesthetist on duty at night and weekends will be charged for her services on the regular hospital bill.

Patients receiving service from a physician on call every other night and every other weekend will not be billed by the hospital but will receive a separate bill from the physician for his professional services.

The above arrangement has been in effect since December, 1958 in order to give 24-hour anesthesia service at the hospital. The announcement is being made at this time due to some misunderstanding among patients who have been admitted to the hospital and were not aware of this arrangement.

Mrs. Mary Russo, the nurse anesthetist employed by Warren General Hospital, is on call every night and every other weekend. Harry M. Wildblood, MD and J. R. Essig, MD are cooperating with the hospital in providing emergency coverage on nights and weekends when Mrs. Russo is not on duty.

The above is a temporary arrangement and an announcement will be made when the situation changes.

KRESGE'S for the MOST of the BEST for the LEAST

Midwest Worries Republicans

By Doris Fleenor

NEW YORK -- Added piquancy has been lent to Gov. Rockefeller's invasion of the old conservative-isolationist heartland, the Midwest, by fresh rumors that Agriculture Secretary Benson will resign any minute now.

A Midwest swing to the Democrats is universally attributed to the Eisenhower-Benson policies which have proved unable to reduce surpluses or prices paid by the farmers whose numbers and incomes have steadily decreased. The President has been rigidly loyal to Benson, and both blame the Democratic Congress for refusing to accept their proposed reforms.

A spot check of Midwest newspapers show them reporting the new rumors more in a spirit of hope than expectation. The New York Times, however, in a Des Moines dispatch quotes Republican Congressional sources as saying Benson will resign Tuesday.

As The Times points out, Tuesday is the date Republicans hope to regain the House seat they lost last year to the Democrats in Iowa's Fourth Congressional district. Iowans in Congress have led a big parade of Midwest Republicans to the White House which demands Benson's head.

The timing suggests that the new rumors may be rather more of an election maneuver than a serious Benson intention. In the district itself, Republicans have the better known campaigner, but sources there say that at this point his disadvantage against the Democrats is profound. Iowa has a Democratic Governor, Herschel Loveless, its first since the depression of the Thirties.

The President, of course, is in New Delhi and the White House is silent. Vice President Nixon, who is minding the store, has long lent his aid and ear to the unhappy Midwest Republicans and his relations with the chairman of the House Committee, Rep. Simpson, are particularly close.

Benson has other troubles. He has just had a gall bladder operation and his superb self-confidence seems a little diminished. He is on leave from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) of which he is an apostle and a member of the church's Council of Twelve. The church has approved of his remaining in the Cabinet, but Utah sources believe it is concerned with the political embarrassments attached to his tenure.

Last year he vainly tried to help re-elect Senator Watkins of his state. Instead, Utah chose Frank Moss, a comparative novice, who is a Mormon but a liberal Democrat.

Democrats are making Benson the major issue in every farm district, and they encounter little trouble in the effort. In the contested Iowa Fourth he was hung in effigy in the Republican candidate's home town. The returns will indicate whether this was over-doing it. The embattled candidate himself, John Kyl, says Benson's policies are wrong but that Benson isn't the issue. This is about as much as any Republican in a farm area will do for the Secretary.

Such developments cause reminiscent shivers among Republicans. National Chairman Morton admits the pressure for Benson's resignation but says he does not expect it and thinks the party will not force it.

That a Benson resignation even with the convenient excuse of his health at hand would be announced by the White House with the President in absentia seems out of character. One farm-belt leader suggests rather grimly that perhaps it's the party's only chance to rid itself of its albatross.

The Guest Who Groans

By
Inez Robb

This is the season to be jolly. But it takes a superhuman effort when you see headless man giving still another shove to Civilization, teetering on the edge of the Abyss. It is no secret that I regard the cocktail party as the curse of civilization, the principle anti-social invention of the Twentieth Century. And canapes, those off-sweepings of the icebox, rate as an instrument of the Powers of Darkness.

So it is with both sorrow and anger that I report that a gentleman in Denver has just received a patent for a device to hasten world collapse. For if there is any social event more apt to curdle forever the milk of human kindness in the veins of its victims than the cocktail rout, it is what is known as "the stand-up dinner" or "the stand-up" supper. Both are just what the name implies. The victims eat vertically. It works out to being "stood up" in spades.

Now I don't mind standing up to be counted, or standing up to the foe, or even standing up to fate, my noggin battered but unbowed. But by the Old Harry or Harry Truman, I don't intend to stand up to eat! When the vittles are ready, I aim to set.

Isn't it enough that modern tensions at meal time afflict man with ulcers, without adding bunions? Out in the Great Open Spaces where I grew up, mama counted the chairs, and she didn't ask more guests than she could seat, including two on the piano bench in case of real emergency.

But the modern hostess who sets out to pay people back (and, honey, don't think she doesn't!) jams her house so full of guests that even stand-up room is at a premium. With vertical feeding and drinking, she can pay back half the community.

A REAL MESS is created every time it rains on the Market st. extension near Warren's north entrance. Pictured here is the Highway Department working on the rubble as they again were forced to clear the highway after the recent rains.

Now, I don't advocate going all the way back to the Romans and eating recumbent, but it's a nice idea. But when someone asks me to a party, I expect settin' space. I'm merry, but my metatarsals aren't. They've been in mourning for years.

(We've all heard of the dinner guest who has waited so long for food that his stomach thinks his throat has been cut. Well, when I have to stand up at a party, my metatarsals think my mind has gone AWOL.)

Naturally, my view of the Denver man's invention is jaundiced. This contraption consists of a holder that contains a socket for a cup or glass (the guest has to choose between whiskey and caffeine; he can't have both at the same time), a frame to support a plate and a hook on which to hang a napkin.

By and large, it sounds more efficient and deadly than a World War II mess kit.

However, with the new patented device, the guest can hold all eating and drinking tools in his left hand. This leaves the right hand free to snatch at food and drink on passing trays or a buffet table. No longer is the poor wight forced to juggle plate, glass and flat ware, forever unable to let go any item long enough to sip his drink or taste the food. In a way, the invention is a merciful solution of the problem of the modern Tantalus.

Nonetheless, I view with alarm any invention that is apt to increase rather than decrease the popularity of the stand-up dinner or supper party. I doubt if the Black Hole of Calcutta would have been any more tolerable for the invention of the Denver gentleman.

There is no such thing as a Bigger and Better party. There are bigger parties, all right; vertical parties with the trilbies in agony, and no seat in sight. I call for the smaller and better party, with parking space for all. Let the board groan, not the guest.

POSTMASTER APPOINTS LITERATURE COMMITTEE

In view of such experiences as that involving Lady Chatterley's Lover and similar literature, Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield is attempting to find an answer to his problem of determining what should be allowed in the mails. To assist him in this delicate task he has named a committee composed of the following:

Douglas Black, president of Doubleday and Company; Dr. Erwin D. Canham, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Rev. William E. Cousins, archbishop of Milwaukee; Roscoe Drummond, New York Herald Tribune columnist; Miss Chloe Gifford, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr. Shane McCarthy, executive director of the President's council on Youth Fitness; Dr. Julius Mark, senior rabbi of Temple Emanu-El; Mrs. James Parker, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of The Christian Herald.

Regarding his appointments and his dilemma the postmaster has the following to say:

"I have today appointed a nine member citizens' advisory committee on literature to help me reach decisions in matters relating to the mailability of books where questions of obscenity arise.

"The Post Office Department is an agency of the people of the United States. It furnishes a public service utilized by the entire people of the country. The Post Office, therefore, has rightfully been charged by the Congress with the responsibility of meeting public standards in its operation.

"In accordance with these standards, specific legislation requires the Post Office Department to deny access to the mails of obscene materials that appeal to prurient interests with detrimental consequences to the public good.

"Any Postmaster General who would permit the Department to ignore completely this legal responsibility, as some critics propose, would be failing in the duty of his office.

"At the same time, I am desirous of exercising this duty, as may be required, in a manner that fully reflects prevailing standards and judgment of the public throughout the country.

"To this end, it is my feeling that an Advisory Committee comprised of civic and literary leaders representing a cross section of American life can be extremely helpful.

"The Citizens' Advisory Committee on Literature will in no sense of the word be a censorship body. Certainly, none of the distinguished citizens invited to serve as a member would accept if censorship were involved.

"The Postmaster General has no authority whatsoever to prevent the publication of literature or its sale through channels other than the United States mails. The Committee, therefore, will be concerned solely with consulting with the Postmaster General, as the necessity may arise, as to whether or not a specific piece of literature submitted for mailing is obscene and should be denied access to the United States mails."

GETTING AROUND RUSSIA

The Doubleday representative on the above committee reminds us of "Travel Guide to Russia", a full-length guidebook to the U.S.S.R. for the benefit of tourists which Doubleday will publish about January 21. It is estimated that twenty thousand American tourists will visit the Soviet Union in 1960, which is twice as many as the 1959 number and four times as many as those making the trip in 1958.

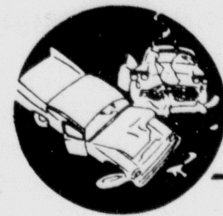

Intended for the armchair traveler as well as for the actual tourist, "Travel Guide to Russia" advises the prospective tourist where to eat, what to take (a sink stopper is a necessity), what to see, what to buy (and where to buy it), how to have contact with Russians and even how to meet Russian leaders.

Including the standard sights, such as the Moscow mausoleum where Lenin and Stalin are preserved, the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad, which boasts forty paintings by Rubens and twenty-seven by Rembrandt, Mr. Levine also includes places ordinarily missed by the tourists, such as a Moscow pawn shop and the site of the jamming towers that interfere with foreign news broadcasts. Highlights in Kiev, Odessa, Tbilisi, Samarkand, Bukhara, and a score of other cities are carefully described.

Besides answering obvious questions, like "Is tipping proper -- and how much?" Mr. Levine tells the tourist what he may photograph, what assistance to expect from the American Embassy, whether he is likely to be followed, and many other facts that are pertinent only in Russia.

Mr. Levine, who spent the last four years in Russia, traveled widely in his capacity as radio-TV correspondent for the National Broadcasting Company, and described many experiences in his best-selling "Main Street, U.S.S.R." In his new book, he covers tourists' problems from time of departure to the return home.

JUST MAGIC

"The Wizard of Oz" is pure magic, and I must thank the Columbia Broadcasting System for putting it on the network. It's for children of all ages, as the saying goes, but most particularly for my age. Here is Judy Garland (not the present, still glorious but slightly battle-scarred Judy), but a fourteen-year-old fresh-faced, fresh-voiced Judy with stars in her eyes, singing "Over the Rainbow" as if the words were all new.

Here are the Munchkins singing in "The Merry Old Land of Oz" and Ray Bolger as the Scarecrow singing "We're Off to See the Wizard," and Bert Lahr as the Cowardly Lion singing "If I Were King," and Jack Haley banging his tin body as the Tin Woodman. But, I suppose a large part of it is the fact that I saw it twenty years ago when it first came out and it gains lustre with each passing year. But what a lot of marvelous touches! I'd forgotten how superb were the shots of flat Kansas with its endless lines of marching telephone poles (based on Grant Wood's paintings).

I'd forgotten how great were the composition of those crowd shots of Munchkins and the great mob at the Emerald City and the excitement and sheer opulence of the chase through the witch's castle. But part of show business - perhaps the greatest part - is what the audience brings to the show--the memory of its own past. (This is what puts the songwriters in such a commanding position over writers--they evoke the long ago with a single chord.) And here it was again--just as it always had been--the past recaptured. The trouble is there aren't many movies quite in that class, or quite that ageless.

It's a lucky thing for television that there aren't. Television--any television--looks awfully prosaic, awfully ordinary, after "Wizard of Oz."

The Frank Sinatra show was a tuneless though hasty improvisation, a great credit to the songwriters if not to the dialogue writers. The Sinatra show had been scheduled as "An Afternoon with Frank Sinatra," a relief from all those "Evenings with . . ." It had been scheduled to be shot on the desert at Palm Springs with the mountains as a back screen and the sky as a cyclorama. Then the rains came and the whole enterprise was shoved indoors with nothing but those chairs and stools which, I must say, I'm finding mighty tiresome.

However, the opening in the desert--everyone scurrying about under umbrellas, and a dance sequence with Juliet Prowse, were salvaged and they were both mighty impressive and unusual. Under studio lights, though, ("What do you think of this handball court," said Sinatra) the songs took full charge (as they ought to) with Sinatra belting out "I've Got the World on a String," Ella Fitzgerald rocking the set with "Just You, Just Me," the Hi-Lo's belting the "Desert Song," Sinatra and the Hi-Lo's collaborating on his first big hit "I'll Never Smile Again" as he once sang it with Tommy Dorsey, and everyone getting together on a medley of Gershwin songs. It was all pretty special as singing goes.

It was something less than that as programs go. The comedy, I thought, sounded wooden and unrehearsed.

JAY NORTH'S ever-present sneakers are the only indication that this angelic choir boy is really Dennis the Menace, getting in the mode for the comedy episode of "The Christmas Show," Sunday evening, Dec. 20, at 7:30 over WBEN-TV.

The direction was stiff and unbending. And the introduction of Juliet Prowse in which she was sung at by Mr. Sinatra was unfortunate. She's a striking looking girl, though, and an extraordinary dancer.

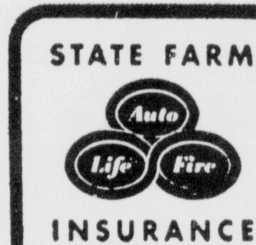

I hate to carp like this but I'm just tired of singers and their guests staring at teleprompters in stiff little rows, reading stiff little jokes. I think the performers ought to tear their eyes from the teleprompters once in a while and look at each other. It adds authenticity.

Televised news passed a milestone last week when CBS sent a tape unit clear to India and there on television cameras it recorded Eisenhower's speech in a succession of beautiful carriages. This is diplomacy by pageantry, I thought, watching it as if it were live television, and let us not underestimate it.

The British used diplomacy by pageantry with crushing effect for many years over great stretches of their empire and while diplomacy by pageantry is not substitute for policy, it is a very great addition to it and should not be altogether forgotten as we Americans are inclined to do. As for having TV cameras on the spot, bringing us the "teeming populace" all but live, all I can say is that "Eyewitness to History" was exactly what its name implied. Others Say ...

ARE WE LIVING IN A POST-CHRISTMAS ERA?

In this Christmas season when the spiritual atmosphere inspired by the birth of Christ is felt by most of us and moves people to a greater level of charity than is their custom during a major share of the year, Christians are apt to become a bit complacent about their religious accomplishments and the progress of the church. The church becomes warm, big, and powerful.

But we suggest that there is no room for complacency. Instead, the challenge is greater than ever. In fact, at least one religious writer suggests we are living in a post-Christian era.

He is Gabriel Vahanian, who translated and wrote the introduction for Karl Barth's "The Faith of the Church". Mr. Vahanian is a member of the Syracuse university's Department of Religion.

You can find a thought-provoking piece on the possibilities of this being a "post" Christian era in the December 12 issue of The Nation. It is written by Mr. Vahanian.

Here are some excerpts:

Despite the overt, proselytizing religiosity of our present culture and society, we live in a post-Christian era. People try God, or original sin, as others try the newest medicine. The historian Arnold Toynbee acknowledges this fact, while the Oxford-Cambridge Christian scholar, C. S. Lewis, ponders over the "unchristening" of Europe, particularly noticeable in literature, as the most important turning point since its christening.

Christianity is today synonymous with religiosity. Its appeal to the masses is almost entirely based on a diluted version of the original faith.

Such religiosity only fulfills civic ends: today it is socially fashionable to be religious. Religious observance has reached an all-time high; and religious affiliation has attained peaks which Jonathan Edwards would not have dreamed of.

In proportion as Christianity is displaced by religiosity, it no longer inspires contemporary culture; its spirit does not impregnate the ethos of our time. As a result, Christianity stands in apposition, if not in opposition, to the modern world. The cleavage between them becomes more and more grievous. Nor does modern man look at all like any of the Big Fisherman's contemporaries.

Christianity has at any rate lost its hegemony. Whether spiritually or politically considered, or both, this hegemony, arduously established in the course of centuries, is now disputed. Certainly, it does not make itself felt in international relations, except as it finds expression in the blunder of a diplomat inviting Jews and Arabs to settle their differences in a Christian spirit.

An observation by Norman Birnbaum will provide an adequate starting point. He once said that "the typical American today is, in fact, a Calvinist with neither fear of hell nor hope for heaven."

The average man is at once too religious and not religious enough. There is nothing surprising in that. The latent religiosity of every man has purely and simply taken over wherever Christianity (seen here under the aspect of Calvinism) has abdicated. The vacuum created by this abdication is filled with a religiosity as shallow as it is intense, because religiosity means that one believes merely for the sake of believing and because the biblical terminology is increasingly foreign to our self-understanding.

To be sure, the concepts of heaven and hell are not so essential to the structure of the Christian faith as foes and fundamentalists alike narrow-mindedly claim. The Christian faith centers on the immediacy of God's transcendent presence in this world of things and beings. This, of course, requires today other modes of thought in order to convey what in a previous era the traditional concepts adequately expressed.

Not surprisingly, "God is a livin' doll," said the Hollywood actress turned Sunday-school teacher. Here is in many ways a more damning pronouncement than Nietzsche's decree of the death of God. Increasingly, one has been able to detect a tendency, especially typical of popular but also of some high-brow religious literature, to emphasize God's love to the exclusion of the no less biblical idea of God's wrath.

He is love and something more, which the unexpected stress on His wrath intends to convey. At any rate, He is not a livin' doll. Such an un-biblical familiarity justifiably calls only for an iconoclastic retort like that of the French poet, Jacques Prevert: "Our Father, which art in heaven, comma, stay where you are." Not only has modern religion inserted a comma, it has also opened wide a chasm between God and man, when it has not simply sublimated God, what with all that sweetness and sugar-coating nonsense. The net result is that religion looks more and more archaic, even tends to resemble magic. But inspirational books are not alone responsible for that.

Some years ago, Elio Vittorini put this question even more incisively. The medieval synthesis, he observed, relied on Catholicism; bourgeois growth and progress on Protestantism: how could Christians, he asked, concern themselves about the Christian quality of an age which will be neither medieval nor bourgeois? Indeed, "technological" and syncretistic religiosity has begun to succeed Christianity. Does it have anything to do with faith, biblical faith? Obviously not, since one of the premises of technological or do-it-yourself religion is that it makes no difference what kind of faith it is. Religion thus loses its nerve.

A blanket of anonymity is descending upon religion, whose resurgence in the last decade perhaps is just a cover-up for the absence of faith in God.

But this resurgence hardly conceals the loss of hegemony suffered by Christianity. There was a time when people, i.e., European people, considered Christianity as the only religion. With the advent of the modern period, Christianity became the "best" religion, especially when it was put in that position with the help of imperialist powers. Today, the Continent has lost its prominence and America does not want to offend the parts of the free world which are not Christian. Maybe this is why the fight against communism is envisioned as a Christian crusade: it is the only area where Christianity can still proclaim its superiority without offending anybody, including those who wield the power of international blackmail.

Admittedly, these statements or, more precisely, the statement that we live in a post-Christian era, may seem somewhat rash. Yet, one must ultimately come to terms with the reality here uncovered, even though partially and imperfectly.

Undoubtedly, therefore, every age is post-Christian. But, so far, this has been true only theologically speaking. Aside from this, however, one would have to admit that, until now, the formative tradition of Western culture has been imbued with the spirit of Christianity. Regardless of how approximately, our culture has been a variation on the translation of this spirit into the arts and the sciences, into a style of life. But the novelty, or tragedy, of our situation lies in the fact that our age is post-Christian both theologically and culturally.

Our problems are mutual and if we can approach them with an open mind, tempered with fairness and common sense, we believe we can continue to foster the good relations so vital to stable employment in our community. Once again, our thanks to our many friends and supporters and our pledge to continue our program for a bigger and greater Warren through the best possible working conditions for the many men and women affiliated with organized labor. MATMEN FIGHT TO DRAW

After having won 13 matches in a row the Warren high grapplers journeyed to Titusville last evening and the best they could bring home was a 22-22 draw.

Tony Ross (95-pound class) pinned Hollabaugh in 1:41 of the first period; Ralph Bibeau (103) was decisioned; Richie Cummings (112) won a decision; Mike Long drew Voisin in the 113-pound class; Chuck Grinnen (138) lost a decision; John Colvin (145) decisioned Helfrick; Ron Seder (154) lost a decision; Everett Haight (165) was pinned in 1:59 of the first period; John Mead (180) drew with Nelson; and Jim Wick gained Warren's tie by a decision in the unlimited class.

The Warren Jayvees won their matches by a 24-23 count on a pin by seventh-grader Ed Buerkle, his first mat victory.

CITY LEAGUE SCRAMBLED AFTER BLUEBERRY WIN

The Blueberry Hill Inn put on a fine display of basketball last night as they defeated the Sheffield Merchants, 88-70, to throw the league lead into a tie between Sheffield and the Busy Bee. Down 17 points in the second period the Innmen roared back to knot the score at half-time, 43-43, then completed the romp in the last half.

Harry Danielson netted 21 points to pace the winners and Bob Kolesar's 21 was high for Sheffield. Busy Bee rebounded after their loss to the Merchants last Monday by thoroughly spanking the Unknowns, 91-57. A 27 point second quarter and a 29 point surge in the final chapter for the Beemen broke the Unknowns' back.

Sam Koebley, the speed merchant for the Beemen, notched 21 points, followed by Ed Lindberg with 18. Jeff Homan led the Unknowns scoring as he garnered 23 tallies.

On Monday Sheffield will meet the Unknowns at 7 and Blueberry and Busy Bee tangle horns in a crucial battle at 8 p.m. A good crowd was on hand for last night's tussles, and more are expected as the league tightens up.

TONIGHT'S SPORT TILTS

All county teams will see action tonight with the exception of the Tidioute Bulldogs, who edged North Clarion on Tuesday, 44-43. The big contest is the engagement on the Beaty floor where the Warren High Dragons will have a two-fold incentive in attempting to stop the Youngsville Eagles. First, they will be out to revenge an earlier defeat at the hands of the Eagles on the Youngsville floor. One can search far into the county records and may not find an occasion where a Youngsville hardwood combo whipped a Warren quintet.

Secondly, the Dragons, with a two-two record, will be trying to keep their season's ledger on the positive side. Warren has been whipped by the Erie Memorial Centaurs and the Eagles and has recorded victories over Northern Area and Erie Academy. Veteran observers are predicting a Warren win tonight, but it will have to come after a hard fought tussle. Youngsville, on the other hand, mentored by Jim Miller, will be out to make it a clean sweep over the Warren forces this year. Their JayVee team also holds a win over the Baby Dragons.

In other county action the Northern Area Knights, current possessors of three losses to Warren, Sheffield, and North East, will journey to North East this evening in an attempt to break into the win column. Their loss to North East was by the score of 66-50. The Binneymen from NA are in for a rough road ahead, but an upset may be in the making in tonight's tilt.

The Sheffield basketball quintet sports three wins and one defeat, that at the hands of county rival Youngsville, as they travel to Johnsonburg for a league tilt there to-

RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT of the local Boy Scout Council at its annual business meeting held Tuesday was James A. Blomquist. Mr. Blomquist, who has been associated with the Scout movement since 1912, said in his acceptance speech that he appreciated the work of the other leaders in the past year and also made some new proposals for the coming year. He stressed the need for a reorganization and enlargement of the existing committees, the promotion of the Chief Cornplanter Council's Trust Fund, the establishment of a public relations committee, and the formation of a conservation planning committee under John Stewart.

The adoption of the name of the council to Chief Cornplanter Council was of prime importance during the regular business meeting. The Scouts have been using the name for years and the resolution was made legal at the meeting.

Newly elected members to the Executive Board are: Harold Banghart, Clifford Betts, James Blomquist, Santo Fadale, Hon. Alexander Flick, Jr., Clair Gardner, John Hickey, William Hill, Richard Huber, Byron Knapp, Earl Mohnkern, Stuart Myers, Edward Ryberg, Richard Schumacher, Karl Timm, Arthur Van Nort, Henry Walker, Duane Wilder, Hadsal Wright, James Wright, and William Yeager.

night. The Santomen are fresh after a well-earned, 45-41, victory over Northern Area last Tuesday. Their other two victories were registered over the East Forest team.

So plenty of basketball is on tap for the evening in the area. Wherever you may be, come out to support your local high school team. It is a proven fact that basketball draws more spectators than any other sport in the nation. See you at the game!
